EIGHT DAYS OF HOPE PREPARES FOR DEVELOPING HURRICANE ISAIAS

Tupelo, MS - Eight Days of Hope (EDOH) is preparing to respond to Hurricane Isaias as it approaches the northern Gulf Coast, with landfall expected late Friday or early Saturday. The storm is forecast to bring heavy rainfall, damaging winds, storm surge, and flooding to portions of southern Mississippi, Alabama, and the Florida Panhandle, with isolated tornadoes also possible.

EDOH's Mass Feeding Ministry is ready to respond to impacted areas for as long as needed. Thousands of meals are already prepared, and EDOH can begin serving within hours of arrival. All details regarding this outreach will be shared at www.eightdaysofhope.com.

"Thousands of meals are ready, trailers are loaded, and our team is standing by," said Steve Tybor, EDOH Founder & President. "When Hurricane Isaias makes landfall, we want to be ready to go wherever the need is greatest. This is what we were made for—to show up for our neighbors, serve those who are hurting, and bring hope when they need it most."

At this time, EDOH anticipates the need for our Rapid Response Ministry to deploy in addition to the Mass Feeding Ministry. Once Hurricane Isaias begins to dissipate, EDOH will begin working with local community leaders and churches to identify the areas in need and launch a deployment. Any updates and volunteer needs regarding our Rapid Response Ministry will be shared at www.eightdaysofhope.com.
